In estending the series on "How Prosperity May Be Retained and Broadened," THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR today publishes simultaneously with the Boston News Bureau and the Wall Street Journal, a fourth article on the subject by C. W. Barron, editor and authority on finance and economics, who kindly consented to contribute to the symposium.

By C. W. BARRON

Christian Science Monitor wired recently to south Florida for a 300-word statement as to:

"How industries can be kept running at near capacity, if markets are made by buyers, and regulated and limited by purchasing ability. Does that mean more purchasing power is needed to increase markets? Are there any new methods or plans necessary to this end?"

The above interrogatories were received too late for mail response, but reply was wired:

Progress by Destruction
Progress is not by keeping the same industries running at or near capacity. Progress is by the destruction of some industries and the creation of new ones. The buggy and wagon business has gone as progress has brought in the motorcar. Happiness and progress are by variance.

In modern machinery these do not require one-third of their time. Therefore really less than 10 per cent of human energy is now required for food production. Hence arise new industries and new wants, each begetting the other. We substitute slike for cottons, steel and comment for timbers and boards, moving pictures for books, telegrams for letters, and in all these is the progress of man.

Human wants are nowhere fully satisfied. It is doubtful if they ever can be. One luxury begets another.

One art develops many others.

There is no conceivable limit to human consumption, and production always lags behind our ambitions.

We should always remember that labor consumes more than 90 per cent of what labor produces. The problem is, therefore, the organisation and reorganisation of labor so that it may produce to satisfy its own and our ever-increasing wants.

A few generations ago the ambition was for land and self-sustenance thereon. Now the ambition is for luxury with as little labor as possible. But in any industrial or economie upheaval there is a movement.

However, he testified further, Mr. Sinclair would not accept the reimbursement, "knowing that I had suffered financial losses," and returned the amount to Mr. Hays.

In this way Mr. Sinclair actually gave $150,000 to the Republican demount to Mr. Hays explained that he did not make these additional facts known at his earlier cent of what labor produces. > WASHINGTON-Will H. Hays, former chairman of the National Republican Committee and now head of the motion picture industry, informed the Senate Committee investigating the Continental Trading Company, that Harry F. Sinclair, involved in the corporation, had contributed $160,000 in Liberty Bonds to the Republican campaign deficit instead of only $75,000 as Mr. Hays had testified in 1924.

Under interrogation, Mr. Hays admitted Mr. Sinclair's contribution made him the largest contributor to the campaign deficit. He added there were other large contributors, but could recall none other than $100,000 that Daniel G. Reed, Richmond, Ind., "loaned or caused to be loaned to the committee" nmittee."
Sum Not Listed

Thomas J. Walsh (D.), Senator from Montana, conducting the inquiry, called Mr. Hays' attention to the fact that such a sum is not listed in the campaign contribution report of the Republican Party.

Mr. Hays' information to the committee concerning the Sinclair transaction was as follows:

That he undertook in 1923 to assist the National Republican Committee to the contribution of the committee to the contribution of th sist the National Republican Commit-tee to extinguish the campaign deficit that remained from the 1920 cam-paign. He had retired from active politics at this time, but "felt a sense of responsibility because the deficit had been incurred while I was chair-man." Among those to whom he ap-pealed for contributions was Mr. Sinclair.

Mr. Sinclair replied he would make "Your problems cannot be answered in 300 words, but if you do not object, I will therefrom write a Wall Street Sermon, and we will publish it together."

Now this is that Sermon, written as the houseboat "Edna B" moves along the Florida keys, and with no late knowledge of the existence of Wall Street or the Dow-Jones news flashes, ticker quotations, or the Wall Street Journal compilations and tabulations showing the financial and industrial progress in action and reactions right up-to-date:

"Is it not a fact that Mr. Upham took the $60,000 in Liberties that you sent him and distributed them to certain individuals in Chicago to certain individuals in Chicago who then went out and sold these bonds in the open market and turned in the cash as their con-tributions?" Mr. Walsh demanded.

FLOOD CONTROL COMPROMISE GOES TO SENATE

Jones Bill Provides Board of Three and $325,000,000 Federal Appropriation

WASHINGTON — A compromise flood control program, known as the Jones bill, has just been placed before Congress by the Senate Com-

The Senate and House committee bills agree on one issue: that the Federal Government should pay the Federal Government should pay the costs of the flood prevention work. In this they differ from the Jadwin measure which would assess 20 per cent of the expenditures to the affected states.

Since the introduction of the Jadwin bill President Coolidge has suggested that the controversy over the question of costs be referred to an independent commission which would study the program and report its findings to Congress next year. The engineering work could proceed in the meantime, unhampered.

After the visit to the commandant's home, Rear Admiral Andrews drove Colonel Lindbergh immediately to the Copley-Plaza. It was a simple arrival; only he and the commandant were in the car; police had cleared ample space; the colonel moved leisurely across the sidewalk, his face a little flushed and almost unsmilling. He made no gesture, he looked neither right nor left; at the door he turned, looked about over the crowd, gave photographers a chance, waited for Admiral Andrews to catch up with him, and disappeared within doors to attend the luncheon, and, a little later, to give an interview.

"There is absolutely the opposite of monopoly," he contended. "The industry is one of the most highly compétitive in the world. The companies sell in open competition and each sale is an active barter, with the buyer trying to get the product as cheaply as possible and the seller trying to get the best possible price."

Block booking was defended as the only economically sound method of distributing metion-picture films by Sidney Kent, general sales manager for the Paramount-Famous Players Company. Definite Program of Character Education and Rigid Citizenship Test Called For

By MARJORIE SHULER On the ground that economy and efficiency in American public schools demand federal consolidation in a department of education with a secretary in the President's Cabinet, the Department of Superintendence of the National Education Association has called upon Congress to pass the pending Curtis-Reed bill.

Opposition to the resolution crystallized on the floor of the convention in an attempt to eliminate it from the report as presented by the chairman of the resolutions commit-tee, A. L. Threlkeld of Denver. The educators had been prepared for criticism of the department from New England delegates and an at-tempt to stop discussion was made by Randall J. Condon, himself from Maine and now the superintendent of Cincinnati schools.

Mr. Condon moved the previous question, which would have checked a speech opposing the resolution, but the delegates voted it down, heard the criticism of the bill, and then by an overwhelming number approved the resolution which stated that current practice, experiments and the results of investigations should be made available to individual schools by a national agency and that "this service can be rendered without in any way interfering with the consti-tutional right of the several states to control, administer, and supervise their own schools.

GERMAN PLAN AS TOO VAGUE

Lord Cushendun Criticizes Proposal to Give Council Additional Powers

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR GENEVA - The outstanding feature of the discussions in the Security Committee is the avowed deter-

ity Committee is the avowed determination of the British Government not to accept any proposal which might have the effect of increasing the obligations which Great Britain has accepted under the Covenant of the League of Nations and the guarantee which it gave at Locarno for the western frontiers of Germany.

Thus when Herr von Simson brought forward the new German proposals, the effect of which would be to give the Council of the League of Nations additional powers for the adoption of preventive measures against war, Lord Cushendun at once put his foot down. He criticised the German proposals as far too vague, and signalling out the suggestion that they should be embodied in a general treaty, he once more emphasised the British objection to such treaties, reiterating his preference for bilateral and regional treaties, the precise objects of which were clearly defined.

Military Status Que snactment of anti-injunction legislation.

The Senate committee has under consideration a bill introduced by Honrik Shipstasd (F. L.). Senator from Minnesota, on behalf of organized labor, which would outlaw labor injunctions. Hearings on the measure have been under way for over amonth, with chiefs of organized labor and heads of commercial and industrial organization and corporations arguing the merits of the issue.

"Paderal judges who see ahead from the state judges who see ahead for them an election at which they will feel the will of the people." Mr. Jones said. "Originally I was an admirer of the federal courts—thought their system of jurisprudence was the greatest in the world. that was Lord Cushendun's final reason for turning the German proposals down. Moreover Lord Cushendun detected certain obvious traces of the protocol of Geneva in the German memorandum, and this of course Great Britain would not have.

M. Paul-Boncour, France, who is the chief champion of the protocol, strengthened British suspicions by coming out strongly in favor of the German proposals. He was particularly pleased at the idea they would involve a measure of control by the League, which was admitted by Herr von Bimson, for Germany has always been ready to accept an alliround measure of control. Herr von Bimson could not understand the British objection to the stabilisation of a military position which, he declared, could be discovered beforehand.

Poland Approves Proposal

Poland Approves Proposal Mr. Sokal, on behalf of Poland, of some measure of control. It was finally suggested that the drafting committee should draw up the text of the German proposals. Lord Cushendun warning the committee once more that as they would involve the states in new obligations they must be drafted in such a definite form that each government could express its final opinion on them.

Lord Cushendun appeared to be almost alone in his objection to the German proposals and the negative attitude of Great Britain once more was sharply criticized by the delegates of other nations behind the scenes.

Reconciling of American Viewpoint With Duties of

League Members Desired BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR other, even if she is not herself willing to share in them, it will be a very big step forward," says the Manchester Guardian, and this statement reof the Council, Lord Cushendun insisting once more that the unanimity rule was a great security in itself. Herr von Simson was evidently rather taken aback by the strong stand which Lord Cushendun adopted against the German proposals, for according to the German argument, they were advanced in the interest of peace, and they could not fail, said Herr von Simson, to establish increased confidence between nations, which would thus undertake to observe certain regulations which were intended to make war more difficult.

Obligation of States

But they undoubtedly increased the obligations of states under the covenant of the League of Nations, and that was Lord Cushendun's final rea-tion in this connection—then the way might be clear for a further advance.

On this account much attention is attached here to William E. Borah's recent proposal that in the event of a breach of the treaty outlawing war, then the League members' obligation to help one another against aggression might still hold good. "If," would give the company all the assistance required for its inauguration, which the outlawry-of-war movement advocates are now talking, in reconciling it with the obligations of League membership."

The Daily Telegraph presenting the conservative opinion points out another important consideration of the proposed treaty, namely that its aim should be not only to find a form of words capable of general acceptance devise measures for suppressing it."

Senator Norris Charges COMPROMISE ON They Abuse Power in Injunction Suits

The Senate committee has under consideration a bill introduced by Henrik Shipstead (F. L.). Senator from Minnesota, on behalf of organized labor, which would outlaw labor injunctions. Hearings on the measure have been under way for over a month, with chiefs of organized labor and heads of commercial and industrial organizations and corporations arguing the merits of the issue.

"Federal judges appointed for life are more inclined to be tyrannical than state judges who see ahead of them an election at which they will feel the will of the people." Mr. Norris said. "Originally I was an admirer of the federal courts—I thought their system of jurisprudence was the greatest in the world. "In recent years I have been driven from that position much against my will, by the logic of events."

In theory, Mr. Norris said, impeachment is the remedy for judges whe abuse their powers, but technologist their powers the proper solution so important it was deemed desirable to place the matter in the hands of a joint administrative agency consisting of the chief of army engineers, the president or place the proper consisting of the chief of army engineers, the president or place

Lord Cushendun Criticizes Proposal to Give Council Additional Powers

BY WIRELESS TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO GENEVA - The outstanding feature of the discussions in the Security Committee is the avowed determination of the British Government the committee in formulating its bill adopted the engineering plan proposed by the army engineers, but that the problem is so large and the proper solution so important it was antee which it gave at Locarno for the western frontiers of Germany.

Thus when Herr von Simson brought forward the new German proposals, the effect of which would be to give the Council of the League of Nations additional powers for the adoption of preventive measures against war, Lord Cushendun at once put his foot down. He criticized the German proposals as far too vague, and signalling out the suggestion that they should be embodied in a general treaty, he once more emphasized the British objection to such treaties, reiterating his preference for bilateral and regional treaties, the precise objects of which were clearly defined.

He denounced the proposal that the states should contract heforehand to observe an armistice after the outbreak of hostilities as impracticable, because an aggressor state which had defed the League would never consent to an armistice or surrender advantages it had gained by a sudden attack.

Herr von Simson could not understand the British objection to the stabilisation of a military position which, he declared, could be discovered beforehand.

The Daily Telegraph presenting the conservative opinion points out another important consideration of the proposed treaty, namely that its sim should be not only to find a form of words capable of general acceptance denouncing war, but also "to devise measures for suppressing it."

For Great Britain will not submit its sovereign right to decids what it shall do for the preservation of peace to a majority vote of the Council, Lord Cushendun insisting once more that the unanimity rule was a great security in itself. Herr von Simson was evidently rather taken aback by the strong stand which Lord Cushendun adopted against the German proposals, for, according to the German argument, they were advanced in the interest of peace, and they could not fall, said Herr von Simson, to establish increased confidence between nations, which would thus undertake against the German propagations against the German argument, they were advanced in the interest of peace, and they could not fail, said Herr von Simson, to establish increased confidence between nations, which would thus undertake to observe certain regulations which were intended to make war more difficult.

Although it costs America more to build ships than other countries because of higher wages and costs, the United States can "reproduce" ships as cheaply as any nation, Mr. Wilder said. "We are prepared," Mr. Wilder said, "with careful thought, approved designs and sufficient grivate capital, to make a sincere, forward-looking effort to solve the problem of the American Merchant Marine, with cooperation of the Government but without expense to it by building ships as much better than those of our forsign rivals as theirs are better than ours today, and by operating ter than ours today, and by operating them in the way our packet boats and ated with substantial success.

The Quai d'Orsay seemed to take the view that Mr. Kellogg had mis-represented the tenor of the antiwar motion voted by the Pan-American Congress at Havana. Its condemnation of war was used to strengthen Mr. Kellogg's own arguments. But the French have produced a copy of the motion by which it would seem that only aggressive wars were denounced at Havana Therefore the resolution supports the French case. Great play is made in the French press with the sup-posed error in the Kellogg note. How is such a blunder possible?

of the League were then ignored. America proposed the extension of the treaty to the six powers. France argued that this was an entirely different proposition and that the cove-nant duties require the denuncia-tion to be confined to aggressive wars. Difficult Proposition Posed But Pertinax poses this dilemma Either the Covenant cannot be reconciled with the treaty outlawing war, and in that case the treaty cannot be accepted whether it applies to two or six; or the treaty proposed is in harmony with the Covenant and M. Briand should not depart from his own proposal of June last because it is extended to six countries." The truth is, though, this is in the realm of theory rather than practical politics, that France on the strict reading of the League Covenant had no right to promise perpetual neutrality toward the United States.

According to the Covenant, there cannot be neutrality in the presence of crime. It is impossible to assume the curious verbal dispute which that the United States will never he blamed by the League. Obviously this is unlikely and almost laughable. Yet it cannot be ruled out as possibility, and therefore if the French interpretation of the Covenant is correct, the Geneva doctrine forbids neutrality in a bilateral or a multilateral pact. Besides, if an exception be made for America, why t for Germany if Germany attacks Poland in the remote future?

Annual Statement on Indian Finances Seen as Satisfactory

Legislature Again Learns of a Surplus Budget Which, Contains No Surprises-Entire Assembly, Including Swarajists, Cheer Sir Basil Blackett

Wireless to The Christian Science Monitor BOMBAY — The annual financial statement which Sir Basil Blackett of the Executive Council laid before the Indian Legislature is another surplus budget. It contained no surprises, no reductions, no increases of taxation. Making good his pledge, he announced the complete final remission of the provincial contributions to the Central Government, thereby giving, through the agency of the provincial governments an increased scope for the expenditure on nation-building services.

The Government proposes utilize the 25,000,000 rupees' surplus to this purpose, thus leaving only a small real surplus of 500 000 rupees. The Finance Member observed that India could not be expected to further cut its military expenditure now it is faced by the knotty problem of the modernization of the army.

The budget is a businesslike docu ment portraying the situation as thoroughly satisfactory both as regards the past and the future.

The whole house, including the Swarajists, cheered when Sir Basil Blackett sat down, after expressing the hope that no storm, either from without or within, would descend on India to disturb the bright prospects of financial well-being to which India seemed justified in looking forward.

The commission recognized some merit in the contention that a flat rate makes large consumers pay part of the company's cost of standing ready to serve small consumers. It held, however, that the cost of serving a customer who uses little or no gas is not more than 50 cents a month. The company preferred the present rate to a service charge of less than 75 cents.

"Education may cost the tax-payer more-what doesn't?-but with the rising cost has come a type of school graduate far better equipped for life they should come and see the schools han formerly, and this is the test."

Thus Miss Cornelia S. Adair, president of the National Education Association, which is closing its convention in Boston, summed up the much-discussed situation in perhaps the first newspaper interview she has granted since coming to Boston. Miss Adair, who still teaches in an

Definite Opinion

Miss Adair's opinion upon this point in the educational system was and their availability for free and has been elected to the executive most definite. She stands strongly against the process of "stepping up" people from one school level to another merely because they are successful upon their present level.
"Why should a man or woman be

"I should like to suggest a ques-

"I certainly do," she answered herself immediately, "I firmly believe in equal pay for equal work. There however. It is said that men have families to support and need more money. But I have never seen a woman teacher who has been teaching for 10 years that didn't have one she was supporting least helping, some one less fortunate than herself.

History Begins in Boston 20 Years Ago in Work of Frederick J. Allen

"In matters vocational we always come back to Boston for beginners," said Miss Emily G. Palmer of the Research and Service Center of the University of California. "Whether we are speaking chronologically or alphabetically we begin the story of occupational studies for vocational guidance with Frederick J. Allen of Harvard University," Miss Palmer said in paying tribute to a pioneer in the Boston Vocation Bureau. "It is not quite 20 years since Mr. Allen published his first series of occupational studies. "Trends in occupational studies are hard to distinguish in such a brief period but it appears that they follow at least three different directions, content, purpose and range. Early studies of occupations gave children information about the products of industry, the trend is now ers and their specific work. The information is such as can be told in

"Of published studies of occupations the greater number are, no doubt, general information for the guidance of young people, and need many more of them; but studies which seldom reach the printer are also being made in trade schools and industry. The information and skills which must be taught the apprentice come from the study of the occupation. Information for the selection, promotion, or compensation of workers in business or industry comes from a study of the job. Variety of purpose marks the second trend of occupational studies.

"Guidance has been found neces-sary not only for the boy and girl in junior high school, but also for the young man and woman in college: occupation, but also for the man on the student the general ability to do the job. To meet this need the range whatever he needs to do when he of occupational studies is increasing. Such studies, however, cannot be left to the research worker alone. "Escaped slaves who are registered at Gedaref are sent to join an Abyssinian ex-slave community which has been formed at Gharb el Gash near Kassala," it is stated. "Work is there found without difficulty for the men. The community is reported to be Sourishing. In no case has any escaped slave been sent back to Abyssinia."

In addition to these estaped slaves, "refugees from Abyssinia sometimes appear in the Roseires and Kurmuk districts of the Fung Province," the letter declares. As a rule such refugees come in parties of two or three or singly, but there have been cases recently when larger groups, humberly 100 or 150 grossed but this are usually accompanied by charges of some kind of crime. The refugees are, however, never compelled to return unless a criminal offense has been fully proved against them. Bir Austen adds to these instances particulars of a recent case which tends to show that the Abyssinian authorities are baginning to adopt a different stitlude toward slavery. On this occasion, they "co-operated in returning to the Sudan an Annak who had been abducted into Abyssinia." When complaint of the sh-duction was lodged with the local Abyssinian official, the latter thanked the British authorities and observed that "as the offense of slave dealing was regarded very seriously by his Government, the accused, if returned to Abyssinia and found guilty, would doubtless be severely dealt with. The assistant district commissioner accordingly handed over the prisoner and witnesses for trial at Sayo (in Abyssinia) by Fitsurari Fants, the local Abyssinian chieftain. The abducted Anusk was released and, as proof of the action taken by the Abyssinian authorities, was sent by Pitsurari Fants to report in person to the assistant district commissioner."

LL night long the stars that look room, hardly more than a loft, I sup-on London have been riding pose, looking out into the oak down the sky, and now, as I branches. What a perfect place in

of the spring that is not far behind. For half a minute I am in doubt what to do with such a day, whether to spend it in the country lanes or in the streets of the city, which will be taking on their violet and liliac hues of mystery as soon as the sun gets high. But I reflect that I have not seen the country for at least a month, and that I have long promised myself another walk in the Broxborne Woods. There comes a sudden vision of a certain beech tree, of a tiny vale, and another of a lane running down among the hornbeams. Very well, the thing is settled. It shall be a day in the country. And, as Robert Frost remarked when he went out to feed the calf, "you come too."

An hour or so on bus and train, and then the square tower of Broxborne Church rises before us, every stone and split flint of it shining in the morning sun and reflected vividly in the ribboning canal below. How fresh and clear the air after our month in London! How deep the bilue of the sky! How quiet the village street! We walk for a short distance straight away from the station, and then take a jog to the left and another to the right and (you leave this to me, for I have been here before and know all the turnings) here we are!

Down the hill we go, and over the brook on a single plank; then up the meadow on the other side. Two stumps, you see, by the upper gate.

But look to the brook. Shall we take the faint path that runnel of their boughs? It is an old path, as I happen to know. Say tan thousand years old, and no one can contradict you. That seems a respectable age to us who have just come out from London, a city hardy older than the Romans, those up and contradict you. Do you see the tiny brick cottage across the field, settled snug and warm -beneath its own particular oak? It was built, you observe, before men forgot that brick may be made beautiful, and it has had two centuries of weathering. Why is it, do you suppose, that I never see such a place without immediately moving into it, in fancy I mean, and spending several years there? Already I have decided where I should have my writing desk—in that upper That is Reynard speaking, and his tone has the accent of derision. And now a farmyard, with pigeons

MINNEAPOLIS SURE OF MAKING PLAYOFF

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn.—Minneapolis ended its home season in the American Hockey Association here Wednesday night by virtually winning second place to assure entry in the championship playoff, defeating the Kansas City Pla-mors, 1 to 6. Kansas City remains the favorite to win third place because the fourth place St. Paul team, in order to gain the position, must win every one of five remaining games while the Pla-mors are breaking even in seven.

Another new feature of the season was the arrangement by which many of the matches of the Short Hills Club were played on its own courts, the other team coming out from New York for the purpose. This proved hardly successful, however, as the local clubs had hard work to get a team together for the trip, and frequently had to default several matches. The results of each team match were as follows:

Yale Club 4 Shelton Club 3 Yale Club 4 City A. C. 3 Yale Club 7 Week A. C.

The lone goal in Wednesday night's becounter came three minutes after the second period faceoff. W. R. Stuart, who played brilliantly, ended a solo rush down the center of the rink with a shot that Goalie Patrick Byrne barely saved. Robert Benson, who starred at defense for the Millers, was on hand to drive the rebound home. The contest before and after the goal was hard fought though scoreless, with Minneapolis having a slight advantage in territorial play. The summary:

City A. C. Wins Playoffs In the playoffs, City A. C. was uniformly successful. Encountering Harvard Club at the Fraternity Squash Tennis Club courts, it defeated the Crimson representatives, 5—2. Then it encountered Shelton Club at Yale Club, and won again, reversing the previous score, 5—2. Lastly, at Columbia University Club, it captured the final round and the championship, by the barest of margins, coming from behind after the former champions were leading at 3 matches to 2, to win the last two after hard three-game struggles, to take the match, 4—3, also a reversal of their preceding encounter.

Another feature of the season was the great improvement of Heights Casino. The Brooklyn organization had been a member of the league for many years, but had been regarded as hardly up to the standard of the other clubs. But the energetic leadership of William H. English Jr., its captain, kept it in the struggle all the way through, and the defeat by Harvard Club in the final match of the schedule was all that prevented play in the playoff.

nis Championship	of the Princeton Cli	ib is individual Star	-"
NEW YORK—For the second time in the competition, Princeton Club is now the Class B metropolitan squash tennis team champion. Its team won the final round of the playoff for the title Wednesday, on the courts of the Harvard Club, by defeating Fraternity Squash Tennis Club, which defeated Yale Club last week, by a score of 6 matches to 1. Capt. Arnold Wood Jr. of the winning team set the example for his team in the first match of the day, by defeating Frank A. Sleverman Jr. in straight games. The Princetonian was at the top of his game, and his driving power kept the court craft of Sleverman from any success. Sleverman was also bothered by the strange courts, which are somewhat slower than his own, and this also told against his getting ability. The score was 15—10, 15—11. In the next match of the day, between W. H. Tevis Huhn, for Princeton Club, and Harvey E. Wilson, the result was reversed, and the Fraternity star, who was defeated on his own courts by Huhn earlier in the season, managed to come through victor, by a considerable margin, 15—6, 15—12. But this ended the chances for the pupils of Walter A. Kinsella, E. L. Maxwell came from behind to defeat the powerful Clifford N. Lawrence of the Yale Club, who won every match he played in, eight in all, though he falled to encounter his greatest rival in the Yale Club-Princeton Club match. Robert Louis Stevenson 3d, another member of the Yale Club team, won six matches and did not lose one, but was an absentee in the final playoff. He was far down on the team list, however, while the others were at the tops of their rankings. Leonard A. Strasser, who was delayed in taking his position on the Shelton Club team, won every match he played, but lost one for his team when he was compelled to default in one of the early matches of the season. Coach Barry Would Have Jump Ball Eliminated From Play

Submits New System to Speed Up Basketball and Banish Center Floor Roughness-Would Take Control From Tall Center

IOWA CITY, Ia.—Elimination of the jump ball at center as a means of speeding up play and banishing scrambles is advocated by Coach J. M. Barry of the University of Iowa basketball team.

A copy of the system has been sent to Mr. St. John, director of athletics at Ohio State University at Columbus, who is chairman of the committee. Dissatisfaction among Western Conference basketball coaches because of the desire for extremely tall centers led Barry to work out the new system which, the originator believes, will seem play. A new plan, devised by Coach Barry,

A new plan, devised by Coach Barry, who is now in his sixth season as Hawkeye cage mentor, calls for plays to start out of bounds under the defensive team's basket at the beginning of the periods and after field goals or free throws have been scored. At the beginning of the game, according to Barry's system, the winner of the toss would have the choice of either the offensive or defensive position. Normally, a team would wish to go on the offense. From directly under the op-ponent's basket out of bounds, any velop team play. Extremely tall cenmember of the offensive quintet could ters will no longer control the play put the ball into play. The offense, sweeping up the floor, would culmisweeping up the floor, would culminate with an attempt at the basket. If the attempt at the basket was good, the team scored upon would take the ball under its opponent's basket and start its offensive work. The same rule would apply when free throws are scored. This new style of play, however, would affect only the jump ball at center. Held balls on the other parts of the floor would remain according to the present rules.

How many fans have noted that the slow hall is being developed more than ever in the major leagues? The heavy hitters have become so acclimated to hitting the speedy balls that pitchers have found the easy floater the best way to catch them off their guards. A change of pace is perhaps the finest asset a pitcher can have today. But the slow ball is more advantageous for constant use against the homerun hitters than the fast one. The way Hainest fooled Ruth and Gehrig as well as most of the other Yankees in the 1926 series is a fine example of what can be accomplished with the slow ball under

Airplane Race Plans for College Pilots

Washington, D. C.

A RACE for college airplane pilots for $5000 in cash prizes and trophies donated by Grover C. Loening, designer of the Loening amphibian plane, will be held at Mitchel Field in June.

In making this announcement the National Aeronautical Association says that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, C. V. Whitney, Reginald L. Brooks, Henry P. Davison and Thomas Hitchcock Jr., will be the judges. Each college flying club will be allowed to enter only one plane, but may enter three pilots. All planes will be of the same speed and power class.

Final details of the race will be completed at a meeting of repreentatives of the Aeronautic Association, which is sponsoring it, and the various college flying groups, to be held in New York, April 9. The types of planes eligible to com-pete also will be determined at Individual medals and a trophy cup will be awarded to the pilots, and cash prizes, payable to the clubs, of $500, $300, and $200, will be awarded to the three colleges with the highest score.

Proofreading is done by men and women, but it is probably the most attractive phase of printing to most girls. A good general education is needed and an accurate knowledge of the language of the country. The proofreader compares the original copy with the proof that the compositor "pulls" and notes corrections to be made by the compositor. T is a problem that needs your wise and intelligent handling—this selection of children's reading.

For the importance of a child's early formative years is today being emphasized as never before.

But the resulting question for most

But the puzzling question for most parents has been—where and how will I find the proper reading material for my growing child.

How this problem was solved To meet this need Mrs. Olive Beaupré Miller created My BOOKHOUSE, and made it possible for all mothers to provide right reading material for their children.

Editha Parsons, Professor of Dramatics and Director of Story Telling, Syracuse University, writes:

"... The material for My BOOK-HOUSE has been chosen by a woman well fitted for the task—an educator, a writer, and herself a mother—certainly the perfect combination."

In building My BOOKHOUSE, Mrs. Miller and her assistants studied and classified children's literature from all interesting countries. Thousands of stories were rejected. The ones that were retained had to pass these reirements: FIRST: Has this story literary merit? SECOND: Will it interest the child? THIRD: Will what it adds to his life be for his good? Is its underlying idea true, does it present sound standards, is its spirit fine, its at-mosphere healthful?

In the nine volumes of the BOOK-HOUSE Group—mothers have at hand for daily use, the fundamentals of good reading which carry a child all through the early formative years.

All representatives must spend full time and serve in any part of the country.

Women who appreciate the importance of our work and are over thirty years of age are invited to write us.

THE BOOKHOUSE Group consists of nine beautiful columes containing 3262 pages, with sturdy bindings. It has large type, easy to read, includes hundreds of illustrations, true to life and in many colors. The best artists have contributed their finest work. The stories were gathered from 47 countries. More reading can be secured in My BOOKHOUSE for less money than in any other way, and of course you know it is right reading for impressionable young minds. Sold on the deferred payment plan. NEW YORK, March 1 (P)—Stock rices turned upward early this afteroon after an carly period of irreguurity. Short covering played an imortant part in the buying movement, ing was widely interpreted as evidence of underlying ease of money conditions.

The general market presented a rather confused appearance. Bear traders continued to pick out new weak spots, while pools brought forward new favorites. Texas & Pacific Coal & Oil sank to a new low in recetion of the omission of the dividend. National Lea ddeclined further in response to the relatively poor 1927 report, and Continental Baking A went into new low ground on growing fears for the safety of the dividend.

On the other hand, new peak prices for the year or longer were attained by Victor Talking Machine common and convertible preferred, eWstern Dairies A and B and Baldwin Locomotive, Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck rallied on reports of an increase in February sales.

The closing was irregular. Effort to extend the rise in the late afternoon under the leadership of General Motors and U. S. Steel, which crossed 138 and 140 respectively, were frustrated when the bear element distributed large selling orders in some of the popular specialties. Early gains by Nash and Studebaker were cut down materially, and there was a sharp decline in Continental Baking A. Total sales approximated 1,800,000 shares.

Foreign exchanges opened steady, with sterling cables around $4.87 15-16.

Bond prices continued steady in today's market. Trading was again in moderate volume, partly in reflection of large new offerings expected on the market within a few days.

Chief interest centered in the announcement that the new $10,000,000 St. Louis-San Francisco refinancing issue will be offered to the public tomorrow at 97 and interest. Simultaneously $49,000,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock will be offered at par to common stockholders.

Other loans reported on the way include a $10,000,000 in 6 per cent preferred stock will be offered at par to common stockholders.

Other loans reported on the way include a $10,000,000 in february issue, and several others. Bonds marketed in February and $787,000,000 in February of 1927. Approximately $88,000,000

STANDARD OF INDIANA EARNINGS REDUCED

CHICAGO, March 1 (P)—Net earnings of the Standard Oil Company of Indiana dropped $29,401,308 last year when the figure of $33,197,456 was compared with $26,598,764 in 1926, according to the annual report read to the stockholders at Whiting, Ind., today by Col. Robert W. Stewart, chairman of the board of directors.

The annual report disclosed that the set carnings dropped despite an increase in the volume of sales from $1,545,708 barrels in 1926 to $33,131,975 barrels last year.

The earnings amounted to $3.26 a share as compared with $6.03 in 1926.

The company ended the last year with a surplus of $108.537,230, a drop of $1,769.845 from the 1936 surplus of $1,769.845 from the 1936 surplus of $1,802,199 reported by Colonel Stewart last year, with remarks that it had been built up in prospect of huge business in 1927, was reported reduced to $49,863,315, the lowest in years.

reduced to $49,865,310, the lowest in years.
On the other hand the company was reported to carry the largest cash and securities reserve in its history, cash, government securities and investments totaling $58,869,833, compared with $65,299,552 a year ago.

The analysis of the report was concluded with the assertion that "your heard is pleased to be able to state that in its estimation the present position of the company is exceptionally strong."

strong."
Stockholders re-elected Col. Robert W. Stewart as a member of the board without a dissenting vote, the stock of the Rockefeller interests not being voted for or against Stewart. A few minutes later the board of directors met in the Standard Oil offices in Chicago and re-elected him chairman of the board, a position he has held for 10 years. E. G. Seubert was re-elected president of the company

EARLY GRAIN PRICES ALL HIGHER TODAY

CHICAGO, March 1 (A) — Correct anticipation that today's unofficial estimates of farm reserves would favor holders, led to early higher prices today for all grains. Heavy profit-taking sales, though, especially in corn, brought about subsequent reactions, but not until rye and oats had established new top quotations for the season.

established new top quotations for the season.

Starting % to %c up, wheat later scored some additional gain. Corn opened unchanged to %c higher and afterward showed advances all around, but then dropped sharply. Provisions went up grade.

Opening prices today were: Wheat —March 1.34 to %, May 1.35 to %, July 1.34. Corn—March 95 to %, May 98% to %. July 1.01 to %. Oats—March 56% to %. May 57% to 58, July old 54%, July new 56.

Wheat closed irregular, %c net lower to % advance, corn excited, % to 1% cdown, oats varying from 1%c decline to %c advance, and provisions unchanged to 12c up.

Prosperity Said to Depend on Power of Labor to Spend and for the individual production of

and for the individual production of food, fuel, clothing and shelter.

Every panic has been followed by a larger output of gold and silver from the mines. Today there is a mining boom from the Atlantic to the Pacific, from Greene Cananea in Mexico and Calumet & Arizona in Arizona to British Columbia and Hudson Bay

Hudson Bay.

We have too many men in the cities, and it may be that unemployment which began in May with the abuttons of the Pour May with the abutton of the troit, backing up unemployment be-tween Buffalo and Chicago, has in-labor at such a lessened wage as enon of the present times. Economies in Fushion Changes

A few years ago the corset manufacturers put their machiner, in warehouses to see if within five years the corset fashion would return. They would have done better to have sent it to the scrap heap to save storage. The southern planter might as well have stored his whitewash for Negro cabins and his lash for slaves. A new age is on in the world and it is the age for freedom and for the dignity of labor. The age of freedom is not for man alone. Woman is being emancipated from corsets and cottons.

It is useless to fight changes in fashions. It is more economic to quickly recognize them and regard none of them as perfect but all as progressive.

New Productions Needed

When, by the changes of fashion or by new inventions, a new labor supply is thrown upon the market, it should not mean the opening of national loss; but it is always temporary.

The main thing in the employment of labor is its elevation into the domain of consumption. The higher the elevation of labor in the wage scale, with efficient and economic production, the greater the consuming power, the greater the stimulus to production, and the greater the expansion of markets in total and in variety.

Let Free Individuals Function Our grandmothers kneaded and baked the household bread. Their grandchildren find a better disposition of their time and hand labor. Our grandfathers fed horses three times a day, repaired harnesses and wagons, and received a small fraction of efficiency therefrom. Their grandchildren ride five times as fast, ten times as far, and feed their iron grandchildren ride five times as fast, ten times as far, and feed their iron horses only as service is needed.

There is no limit to purchasing ability, if only the right machinery is put into the hands of labor to produce the right goods, for let it again be said, labor consumes what labor produces.

Markets take care of themselves when once you produce the goods to kets." All needed methods and plans are operative now with the inventive genius of the mechanic and the business man. Better plans cannot be made by law or legislation. Individ-creased the number of men seeking their fortunes with pick and shovel. Certain it is that the opening of new mines on this continent is a phenomployment but rather stimulate it to find better employment and produc-

and sewers extended into new terri-tories and cheap shelter provided for emergencies with such waste labor. But as it would be for the most part untrained, irregular in organi-zation, and for future service, not more than half wages could be economically paid by the taxpayers. In the end the product would cost the taxpayers, interest and inefficiency considered full value, but there would be a saving to the community as a whole. Eventually effi-ciency might be increased and a profit realized for the community without pulling down the highest economic standards for labor. Social Crimes With Social Progress

At present it is an economic and crime that husbands and fathers, for misdemeanors and actions against society, should be thrown labors.

There should be a better underpoorhouses or new charity funds. It should mean the starting of new economic forces to employ the new labor to still further supply human wants and enlarge the consumption wants and enlarge the consumption make social and economic progress.

But the great truth ever to be kept in mind is that which has been most highly exemplified in America, that labor is the great consumer, and by such consumption makes possible mass production and low prices.

It is the protected American standards of labor that have given this country a wage scale far above the world outside, and at the same time a consuming ability and general prosperity and a national happiness undersed of 100 years ago.

Would you go to court without a lawyer...?

THERE is a technique in law as in investing, acquired only by long and active experience. Even lawyers employ specialized legal counsel in their own behalf.

If you are an investor, your affairs are on trial. Success is so much more secure if you add the counsel of long experience to your own.

Our experience represents many years of contact with Wall Street. We know the pitfalls that menace the experienced as well as inexperienced. We appreciate and use the values of the two schools of thought - the fundamental and the technical. Unusual profits by our subscribing members is the proof of our worth.

Why not harness the ability and sane judgment of a corps of financial specialists to your own? Have your holdings watched with unremitting vigilance? Get immediate advice as to impending market changes which affect you specifically,

Here is certainly an answer to the question of what more can we do in radio. Today it is practically impossible for the layman to even hear and the creating possibilities.

Here is certainly an answer to the question of what more can we do in the same of the same old was true, but the general tone of his protest was that there was nothing turther ahead for radiocasting in its present form.

There is rather a hopeless tone in this, and we feel that no one should ever feel that he has gone as far as he can in any direction. It is the disregard of this natural tendency that has opened up the many new paths that make our modern will be a provided in the profo

Let us clarify this a bit. Modern music is not the jazz of today, or the dance interpretation of the classics. Modern music is the newer school of the classics, which, starting with Debussy, has been gathering momentum yearly. It is a great movement, and thousands of beautiful things have been written by these new composers. Yet but a tiny minority of the public even knows that it exists.

If the radio public has been considered ignorant as far as the masters are concerned, let us state that

GREEK POLICY 18 EXPLAINED BY MINISTER

Serbian Statement on the Balkan Situation Greatly Pleases Greece

PROIAL TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITO ATHENS—The declarations that the Serbian Foreign Minister, Mr. Markovitch, recently made concerning the situation in the Balkans, have produced most agreeable impressions on Greek circles here.

"They were clear and straightforward, from the first word to the last; and the tone used in them was mod-erate and calm," is the comment of The declarations made by Mr.
Michalakopoulos, the Greek Foreign Minister, at a party gathering in Saloniki may be considered as an in-

Balkanic peoples must settle their differences among themselves by mutual understanding, without having re-course to the intervention of the great powers, and that none of the others, but should be on an equal footing.
Mr. Michalakopoulos went on to give his views as to how the relations between the Balkanic powers should operate. He entertained the idea that no foreign element should be allowed to mix in Balkanic affairs. On the other hand, he justified the intervention only of Italy in Albania by the fact that the great powers have since 1921 recognized that she has "especial interests" in that country. If the theory of "the Balkans for the Balkan people" means the removal of foreign intervention, it also means that not one of the Balkan states has the right to claim hegemony over its neighbors, he declared. If the idea of maintaining the status quo in the Balkans predominates in the rest of the peninsula "as it predominates in Greece," without cherishing any ulterior aim of gaining hegemony over others, it will be possible to conclude, two by two, arbitration pacts for the peaceful solution of disputes, and to co-ordinate them in such a way as to form a general guarantee treaty. Mr. pool, now the most powerful body Michalakopoulos is desirous that of producers in the British Empire, Greece and Serbia set the example in concluding a pact like this.

The Budget and the People

YEN. HERBERT M. LORD, Director of the T United States Budget, made a statement recently at an alumni dinner in New York, which merits much wider public attention than it has received. The Associated Press "covered" this address in a dispatch of fewer than 100 words, but in that brief dispatch were contained a few figures which the taxpayers of the Nation may consider with great profit. The dispatch

Reduction of one inch in the size of domestic money order blanks has saved the United States a yearly expense of $8,152,000, Gen. Herbert M. Lord, Director of the Budget, told the New York Colby Alumni Association tonight. Another yearly saving of $13,000 was made by discontinuing printing stripes on mail bags, he said. General Lord said that $2,392,000,000 of the total Treasury surplus of $2,592,000,000 had been saved by the budget system, but added that the "public receives these figures with as little enthusiasm as an appointment with the dentist."

The budget system has been in operation only a few years and thus far has been very largely an experiment. If, in the short time in which this experiment has been going on, the vast sums indicated in the figures given by General Lord have been saved to the people, it is evident that still greater savings may be accomplished by further study of the budget and the discovery of other ways of avoiding unnecessary expense. That $8,000,000, a sum that would endow a great educational or charitable institution, or provide a large individual fortune, has been saved in one year by cutting a single inch from money order blanks, and that $13,000, which would provide a generous annual income for a good-sized family, has been saved simply by not printing stripes on mail bags, gives some indication of what may be accomplished in years to come by the discovery and stopping of much greater leaks, which everybody knows are present in the public expenditures, not only of the Nation, but of states, counties, and municipalities.

General Lord's remark about the indifference of the public to these figures is one that the people should take to heart. They should give hearty support to the great effort, disclosed by General Lord's figures, that is being made to save their money. If more than $2,000,000,000 has been saved by simple expedients, two of which were mentioned by General Lord, what vast economies might be accomplished if practical and wise measures were taken to stop, for instance, the tremendous waste of the people's money on wars. Andrew W. Mellon, Secretary of the Treasury, recently declared that eighty-two cents of every dollar taken from the people in Federal taxation is spent in preparation for future wars and in paying for past ones. It would seem that it is only everyday common sense for the people to insist that their chosen public servants should find means to stop this enormous waste. The flood of the people's money that flows out to pay for wars compared with the little leaks from money order blanks and mail bag stripes, is a full flowing river beside a rippling rill. The people can stop that flood at its source, if they awake and give the word.

Seeking the Truth in History

RROGANT and inflated nationalism may find expression in textbooks as well as in overgrown navies, and the former may be as serious a menace to the peace of the world as armored cruisers or submarines. Last summer in Toronto the World Federation of Education Associations set a committee at work upon the task of formulating specifications for the writing of future textbooks in the field of history. While the report has not been made public, the plan is said to call for schoolbooks that will not make Britons of Americans or Americans of Britons, while cultivating patriotism through a study of national heroes. To lay down rules of fair play in writing history ought not to be difficult. The real problem, however, is when, in the interests of truth and fair play, statements have to be made that run counter to inherited opinions. Then we have a prolonged battle of books, claim and counter-claim, reports without end, culminating in the fiasco in Chicago, concerning which one may both laugh and weep

In the days when Victoria was Queen, there was no issue. Bancroft and his imitators made the eagle scream often enough to satisfy the more ardent patriots, if not the Anglophobes. Schoolbooks were written, not by historians but by professional textbook writers. The trouble began as history became more and more an exact study and was being written by specialists. Then came the Great War, with its revival of race antagonisms and the discovery that the United States was not homogeneous in its culture, and the textbook "war" became acute. We were told of the existence of a villainous plot to de-Americanize America. The alarm became general, and educational, fraternal and patriotic societies were stirred to action. Cities and towns started investigations and, running true to form, the matter soon thrust itself into

The Wisconsin law is typical of those on the statute books of several states: "No history or other textbook shall be adopted for use or be used in any district school, city school, vocational school or high school which falsifies the facts regarding the war of independence, or the war of 1812, or which defames our nation's founders or misrepresents the ideals and causes for which they struggled and sacrificed, and which contains propaganda favorable to any foreign government." Upon the complaint of any five citizens, the State Commissioner of Education must hold a hearing within thirty days, and if his decision is against the textbook, state aid is withheld from the school using it. The silence of this particular law with respect to the Mexican and Spanish wars is not without significance.

How to teach patriotism, without giving offense to other nations, is the heart of the problem. A nationalistic interpretation of history may be a most serious social menace if it is nothing more than indiscriminate and uncritical laudation of the cultural and political development of a people. Such was the marked tendency in imperial Germany before the establishment of the Republic. Witness, for example, Treitschke and Nietzsche. On the other hand, the truth-seeking historian faces this dilemma: The more judicious he becomes in his appraisal of events, and the more careful in his bestowal of praise or blame, the more likely he is to incur charges of disloyalty.

It is a curious anomaly that the opposition to many recent textbooks in history has been in almost direct proportion to their accuracy and literary charm. One of the chief reasons for the widespread hue and cry against some of the newer histories is the inherited mental inertia that makes the acceptance of new truth a difficult process for the average man. Religion, for example, furnishes repeated instances of the disinclination of the human mind to be thus disturbed. So in history. Some regret the necessity of giving up Parson Weems's portrait of the father of his country as a "chubby little angel with azure wings."

There would doubtless be general agreement upon the proposition that history is something more than chronology. The historian is not merely a cataloguer of past facts; he is an interpreter as well. But this is a long way from the identification of history with propaganda, whether for peace or war, for national glorification or international good will. It should be remembered that fear and distrust on the part of other nations against the United States arise not so much from the relation of facts as from the way in which they are interpreted and used. It may very well be the case that history textbooks written for the seventh and eighth grades should not dwell upon the national defects of the United States and should idealize so far as possible its national heroes. But this may be done without bombast, without superiority complexes offensive to other nations and races, and without biased reflections that arouse distrust and fear among those outside the country's borders. Certain it is that there is no problem the right solution of which will have a more immediate as well as enduring bearing upon the peace of the world than the production of impartial and unprejudiced textbooks. It may be devoutly hoped by every friend of international good will that the committee of the World Federation of Education Associations will point the way to a full and final solution of this all-important

Japan Moving at Automobile Speed

APAN has begun to take the motorcar unto itself, and the next few years may well be expected to witness an enormous increase in the number of automobiles, principally of American manufacture, to be found in that country. The explanation is that the Japanese are beginning to grasp the truth that the motorcar, properly utilized, is not a luxury, but a sound investment producing good returns to the owner. As yet Japanese officialdom does not realize this, and oppressive taxation exists in many quarters, notably in Tokyo, a taxation so high that it defeats the end it is intended to serve of increasing state revenue by keeping the number of motorcars at a minimum.

When it is remembered that but seventy years ago the only wheeled vehicles in all Japan were cumbersome carts drawn by oxen, the conquest being made of that Nation by the automobile is the more noteworthy. These early impedimenta to travel-and they were impedimenta rather than aids-were displaced by the jinrikisha and by two-wheeled carts for goods shortly after Japan was opened to the western world. Steam railway trains and electric cars followed and the pace of Japan was quickened. During the past few years the number of automobiles in the country has considerably more than doubled, and so great is the demand at present that more than one American automobile manufacturer has seen fit to establish an assembling plant on Japanese soil. Few countries are as admirably adapted to motor transportation as is Japan. With a population of 60,000,000 congested on four comparatively small islands, distances between cities and towns are short. Shipment by motor lorry direct from door to door instead of by train, with the consequent rehandling, is more economical. Moreover, railway construction in Japan is exceedingly expensive, owing to the mountainous nature of the land, and grades that are impossible to a railway are easily made by the motorcar.

Japan has, in reality, moved at automobile speed during the past half-century—in politics, in education, in economic well-being and in other phases of national activity. There can be no doubt now that Japan is to move at automobile speed in a physical way before more than a few years have passed.

Bigness and Efficiency

DECAUSE of the success of certain great manufacturing enterprises, formed in most cases by the consolidation of a number of small concerns under one central management, the belief that increase of capital and output in an industry invariably results in more efficient production, with a corresponding benefit to the consumer of the product, has gained general acceptance. Along with this supposed advantage of what is termed "mass production" there is assumed to be a reduction in manufacturing costs, that in the usual course of trade should be manifested in lower retail prices. In all discussions of the economic effects of the develop-ment of great combinations that dominate the production of important commodities, it is usually alleged that the benefits of consolidation have, to some extent, been shared in by the consuming public. Whether this claim is true does not appear to have been made the subject of sufficient research and analysis to warrant positive conclusions, but there is at least a grave doubt as to a reduction in prices at all commensurate with the increased profits of the manufacturer.

That mass production does reduce costs for the producer is not questioned. The real issue involved is that of the ultimate consumer, whose interests are at least equal to those of the manufacturer. Mere production at lower costs would not be an achievement to boast of if the general public, whose buying makes possible the existence of the producer, received no benefit. It is here that the eulogists of bigness fail to show that there is necessarily a relation between size and public service. If the principal effect of cheaper production is, as on the face of the testimony of the course of retail prices appears to be the case, greater profits for the manufac-turer, the humble consumer may be pardoned for wondering where he comes in.

On behalf of the manufacturer it is urged that either there has been no increase of prices because of consolidations, or that where there have been increases they were due to higher costs of retail merchandising, or to changes in the value of the dollar that have had the effect of marking up prices as expressed in terms of money. The question as to the much higher range of prices that now prevails, as compared with the preconsolidation era, for many commodities produced by great combinations, is complicated by the problem of quality, as well as price. If the consumer is getting better goods, he may be paying no higher prices than under the conditions prevailing a generation ago. Until that point is settled the upholders of bigness can hardly be allowed to have established all that they claim for it.

International Decalogue

CIPEAKING recently in New York, Judge Florence E. Allen of the Supreme Court of Ohio recommended obedience to the Ten Commandments as a means of maintaining world relations on a high level. Although the proposed device can scarcely be considered novel, the manner of application which the speaker stressed contains sufficient freshness to make the opinion of more than passing interest. There are not any Ten Commandments between the nations," the speaker said, indicating that the collective application of this enduring code has been too little considered and too long. neglected.

Individuals in Christian nations have taken the Ten Commandments for granted, and have, at least tacitly, though perhaps not too rigorously, conducted themselves and their affairs according to their dictates. Self-respecting persons have acknowledged gladly enough that were not to kill or to steal, not only because e acts in themselves are abhorrent, but also ause it is commonly understood that perpetors of such deeds forfeit their claims to respected citizenship. But why individuals, even though not of especial religious bent, who have acknowledged obedience to the Ten Commandments as a proper method for self-government. should be able, in collective action, as nations. to engage in ruthlessly breaking every one of these laws, is, perhaps, one of the world's unexplainable riddles. It is, therefore, of deep import and encouragement that with increasing frequency today convictions are being expressed concerning the necessity of adopting one single code of ethics, applicable to nations as to individuals. "Thou shalt not kill"; "Thou shalt not steal"; "Thou shalt not covet," constitute a code that, as Judge Allen pointed out, should be accepted as universally applicable, since, as she said, world peace "is eternally a question of applying ethics between nations." Observance of this code must, obviously, lead groups and nations, just as it does individuals, in the direction of tranquillity wherein necessity for such a code disappears in a sense of sympathetic understanding and love which is the fulfilling of the law.

Indeed, the very great and practical beauty of this ideal is that no one needs to wait for the formulation of international statutes. Each one may adopt this code in his own affairs and in his views concerning world government so effectually as to spread the contagion of desire for its adoption in all social, national and international groups. When this standard is so insistently emphasized that its adoption by groups becomes inevitable, the evils which lead toward world discord will, as Judge Allen further commented, "cease to cut at the very roots of human progress."

Princeton University's school of geology on wheels will cover more than 11,000 miles this summer in less than six weeks in studying natural formations. Looks as if they weren't going to leave a stone unturned in their search for knowledge.

In a note in this column recently attention was called to a word of one syllable with more letters than "strength"; but that word was "stretched." It may be interesting to note that "scraunched," without being stretched, is still longer.

WOOD-CARVED Buddha rested placidly against the steel davits of a lifeboat suspended overhead. A brazen Po Sho-lo, accompanied by his inevitable tiger, sat on the deck seeming to watch, not far off, a rivulet of oil from a working winch. A pair of fine lacquered vases stood in the scuppers, leaning against the rail. All about lay the handiwork of Fukienese artists wood carvers, brass workers, lacquer craftsmen.

A hundred passengers crowded the small space while unsmiling Chinese merchants showed them piece after piece, quoting incredible prices. But the day had just begun, and these prices were merely the opening cue for the play of haggling which so delights the typical Chinese. We were a Nord Deutscher Lloyder en route for Europe from north China ports, with a company of Germans, British, Americans and others aboard. Those destined for European ports were mainly China folk going "home" on Most of us had had our fill, during the past several years, of curio shopping. But the sight of Chinese handiwork had aroused again the latent instinct for bargain The Chinese, I suspect, knew this. When their opening prices seemed to dampen enthusiasm, they did nothing bout it, but bided their time. They knew to a minute how long the vessels would lie at anchor here and estimated to a nicety the passengers' "sales-resistance." Nor were they doomed to disappointment.

We were anchored in the Min River, about twenty miles from the sea and ten miles downstream from Foochow, the Fukien Provincial capital. We were at Pagoda Anchorage, which in 1884 was the scene of a naval encounter between the French and the Chinese in the war over the question of Tongking. We, also, were met by a Chinese fleet, but it was a peaceful flotilla.

As quick as the junks in getting alongside us were the sampans on which the merchants brought us their wares. They clambered up ropes to the "mittel-klasse" deck aft and then elevatored their stuff after them. Much of it was in special boxes, the vases and the larger Buddhas and Kwang-yins, but a lot came loose in baskets, whose contents were soon neatly displayed in rows or in piles on every available flat or flattish space.

There were carven water buffaloes, and innumerable sitting and standing Buddhas. There were lacquerwares of all kinds, from boxes, small and large, picture frames, t table bookracks, small tables, chessmen, checker counters, walking sticks and paper umbrellas with gorgeous redlacquer handles, up to the really splendid lacquered vases lovely form and featherlike weight, for which eighty dollars a pair was asked.

Fukien it must be remembered, is the Province par excellence of the lacquer workers. The wares from there have won many international exposition prizes, and even in this place, remote from the salesroom atmosphere, there were possibilities that good things were to be had.

The "Kajütpassagiere" came down from their upperdeck aloofness to mingle with us and nose out bargains. In this we were joined, too, by numerous members of the crew, half of whom, I suspect, would be sporting lacquer walking sticks when they paraded the best streets of Bremen at the journey's end.

National characteristics came out in the bargaining process. One American couple utterly ignorant of the Chinese love for haggling, bought what they liked at first prices. The merchants missed the usual pleasures of sales-making, but they were evidently more than compensated by the money they got, for Chinese whose wares were arrayed on the other side of the hatch heard of this couple and began seeking them out, urging extra-specially fine pieces upon them.

A German girl, on the other hand, much of the postwar period, as athletic in type as the average American college girl, carefully asked prices for similar goods from all the five or six independent merchants. And even then she shrewdly waited until later in the day, confident that prices would come down as the hour for departure neared.

Nor was she to be disappointed in that guess.

A Filipina, who must have had most prosperous days in Shanghai, where she boarded us, was the most zealous of the buyers. Perhaps she contemplated resale in Mania. In any event, she gathered to herself great quantities of the smaller things, haggling and departing, returning and haggling again, to the huge delight of the Chinese, who recognized in her one like themselves.

Money difficulties were encountered. Most of the passengers, if they had any Chinese currency at all, had Shanghai or Peking dollars. These the Foochow men would not accept, for their exchange at Foochow moneyshops would mean a discount loss. Hong Kong money they would not accept, and one army officer's wife, en route to Mahila, made several trips to the sanctum of the "Zahlmeister" to exchange her Shanghai bills for paper the sellers would take.

Nor was she alone in this difficulty, nor in finding its solution in the purser's office, until finally, not three hours before sailing time, that good gentleman betook himself to shore on some purely mythical business. We were scheduled to be loaded by 3:30 and to sail at 4. By 2 those who had gone ashore to see the fourteenthcentury pagoda had returned and the crowd of potential purchasers was increased. Business became brisker. Stocks were becoming depleted and staterooms by contrary, were becoming more filled. The merchants wore expressions of quiet, but unenthusiastic, contentment.

Busily they persisted, disposing of this and that more difficult piece of goods. They chattered in pigeon-English to Americans and British, and in sign language to Germans and to a group of Czechoslovakian stage people who were in the company of passengers. By either method they succeeded in their purposes, for when the junks moved off from our forward deck, their total stocks comprised less than a quarter of what had come on board in the morning. And when the third officer came aft at 3:50 to shoo them all away, they found that a single sampan would take back to shore the remnants of what had required seven sampans to bring eight hours earlier in the

A group of perhaps 120 passengers had purchased during the day much more stuff than a single Peking curio shop will sell in two months. Customs revenues in many lands would be slightly enhanced, baggage troubles for many travelers slightly increased.

I asked the last of the merchants, just before he swung overboard to the waiting sampan, how much he estimated the day's sales. "No can tell for sure, master. May be six hundred, may be seven hundred dollars, may be not so much; may be little more!" A dear old lady, a missionary of many years' service in Kansu, now en route to Manila to await Chinese developments, leant against the rail as we swung around to return downstream toward the sea. "And do you know, I bought a lovely Kwang-yin to send to my daughter. I paid nineteen dollars for it. And would you believe it, the same man sold another, practically the same as mine, for eight dollars just a quarter hour ago!" hour ago!"

A Secret of Progress

AN INTERESTING device for the speeding up of roadmaking is reported from the Belgian Congo. There, as Mr. T. A. Barnes incidentally mentioned in the course of his lecture at the Royal Geographical Society, the gift of a car to a native chief even in densest jungle arouses in his simple yet practical mind a determination to use might have languished long enough. The lecturer, indeed, spoke of the device as "the secret of successful road-making in Africa," and suggested that we might do well to adopt it in our own colonies. Some of us who live in remote and benighted areas even in this country may examine enviously its possible application to home purposes. Who knows but that the icious gift of, say, a vacuum cleaning outfit to the chairman of a parish council in darkest England might not rouse him to demand that electricity be laid on in the village; and who shall estimate how much eagerly the chairman of an art gallery committee might forward the laying of the foundation-stone if he could be certain of the perquisite of a Sargent, an Orpen, or a John when the structure was complete? On such lines Gilbert's Mikado would have had no more difficulty in making the reward fit the service than the punishment the crime.—Manchester Guardian.

New Judea and the Tree

THE tree is the symbol of the Jewish settlement in Palestine. It is expressive of the new Jewish life out of which is some day to grow a strong Jewish Community, from which, so it is hoped, there is to radiate a cultural influence over Jewry everywhere.

The custom in ancient Palestine was to plant a tree whenever a child was born. The tree grew with the child, the growth of the one becoming symbolic of the growth of the other. Thus grew the ancient forest of Israel, and for a man to be able to live "under his vine and fig tree" was to attain the greatest happiness in life.

In the modern rehabilitation of Palestine, this custom is being revived. Through the Jewish National Fund, the tree has again assumed a towering, emblematic position. The tree has even been suggested, with only pure white as its background, for the flag of the New Judea.—

A Sign of the Times

THE Associated Press has sent out a notice to division I points urging greater care in the filing of crime news. The note to editors says that care should be used in not making it appear that general interest has been centered in some crime story, when the interest is largely local. -Editor and Publisher.

Only Fourteen

AFTER an exhaustive investigation of the world's longevity statistics, Dr. Kyril Popov, State Director of Statistical Research in Bulgaria, has drawn up a report indicating that more Bulgarians live to a greater age than any other people in the world. In their small kingdom, of considerably fewer inhabitants than London, there are no fewer than 3139 persons who claim to be centenarians, and who can produce some evidence to that effect. Free-dom from worry and placidity of disposition were found to be the magic talismans that keep them alive so long. There are very few physicians in Bulgaria outside the infrequent towns, and strong constitutions, rather than ical aid, conduce to survival to a ripe old age. The doctors sent round by the Government to investigate the circumstances of these venerable persons found that only fourteen of them had ever received medical treatment.

"Wanted a Fresh Quality of Sound"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR: I was interested to read the article entitled "Wanted a Fresh Quality of Sound," on the editorial page of the Monitor. In this article the statement was made, "He has only another form of what he possessed before." "Tone colour" interests me, but often a specially good player gets original effects that are rare. I have never since heard a trombone solo played like Arthur Pryor, formerly of Sousa's band, played one at the Dome, Brighton, Eng. somewhere in 1902. It was called, I think, "Love's Enchantment" and Mr. Pryor produced in his playing of it a marvelous mellowness like a soft mixture of horn and violin. I have often asked bandmasters and trombonists why these days we never hear a trombone solo played like Pryor played the one referred to 20 years ago. They shake their heads sadly—or they laugh good-humouredly—but all of them say, "Well, a trombonist like Arthur Pryor can get a special tone colour that you'd only hear when he is in the mood for such an effort—and anyhow only one such a player is produced in a century."

Only when some entirely new instrument is used will a new "tone colour" be made. Even when at the Savoy Hotel, London, some band players used saws bent to and fro to make a kind of peculiar whistling noise, there was nothing completely new in it.

E. P. C. AMPHLETT. nothing completely new in it. Westminster, Eng.

A World Coinage TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

The recent very interesting article in the Monitor from Paris entitled "Ecu Proposed as New French Currency Unit," closes with a paragraph headed "Dollar as Basis." That paragraph in my opinion is the plum of the article, though all is good. I am not an economist by profession, but there are some parts of economics that peculiarly attract me. Pre-eminently among these is the project for a world coinage. The proposition of M. Gide is an important contribution to it and perhaps I may be allowed to send you the copy of a letter which I sent to The Times some years

It shows how best the English monetary system can be brought into line; but it gives no arguments. It seems to me essential that the dollar should be the unit. The letter

I refer to read:

It is most unlikely, as it would be unwise, to alter the value of our penny apart from a larger scheme for reconstituting our coinage generally. If we are ever to adopt the decimal system it should be done more thoroughly, bearing in mind the greater aim of a general system which might eventually become a world system. As the United States and Canada are not likely to alter their system, would it not be desirable that we should come into line with them, and at the same time find ourselves decimalists with no substantial change in the value of our penny? This can be done by increasing the gold value of our sovereign by about 7½d. and making the double sovereign the gold unit, or, if it is thought better, the dollar. Two sovereigns or the double sovereign would thus divide into ten dollars and the dollar into 100 cents (halfpennies).

"When Mild Methods Are Inadequate"

TO THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR:

Your editorial, "When Mild Methods Are Inadequate." recalls an old favorite "declamation for the last day of school," entitled "The Patter of the Shingle."

Those who would use the plea that prohibition does not prohibit, to obtain its repeal, and then find that argument used as a basis for enacting far more severe penalties for violation, are apt to be in a position to sympathize with the boy who afterward wished emphasized so strongly his belief in the sentiment, "Spare the rod and spoil the child."
